Special on-line ISCAR Summer seminar for PhD students

“Cultural-historical psychology today: research challenges & practical perspectives”

6-8 July, 2020

Application deadline: June 5th, 2020

Despite more and more Russian and foreign scholars applying the ideas of L.S.Vygotsky, A.N.Leontyev, A.R.Luria, A.V.Zaporozhets, D.B.Elkonin, V.V.Davydov in their research, interpretation and understanding of the theoretical and methodological basis of this scientific approach often remains incomplete. Thus, turning to the original texts of L.S. Vygotsky and his followers represents one of the priorities in international psychological studies. This trend determines the common interests of Russian and foreign researchers and creates the necessary basis for joint discussions as well as research & practice projects.

We invite the international community of CHAT young researchers to join the special on-line seminar “Cultural-historical psychology today: research challenges & practical perspectives” to be held on July 6-8, 2020 by Moscow State University of Psychology & Education.

The program of the seminar is aimed at providing a broad introduction into the theory and practice of research in the field of development and education with a focus on the cultural-historical psychology and activity approach (L.S. Vygotsky, A.N. Leont’ev, A.R. Luriya). The on-line seminar will cover the following subject areas:

- theoretical and methodological foundations of the cultural-historical theory and activity approach in the research of various aspects of education and development, research on modern childhood; philosophy of education and science; examples of research projects in the field of psychological science and education);
- solving pedagogical problems in education; activity approach in investigating problems of communication in the social sphere;
- theoretical and experimental research of learning and development.

The on-line ISCAR Summer seminar is created to give participants from different countries the opportunity to:

- ✚ broaden their knowledge in theory & methodology of CHAT
- ✚ discuss the best examples of applying CHAT to creating social practices
- ✚ get the research design review

All participants of the seminar can submit the abstract of research design for the international scientific journal “Cultural-historical psychology”.*

The initiative is aimed at scholars interested in scientific reflection of their research idea, the ways of its` implementation, the relevance and scientific perspective of the research, as well as the discussion of the issues of constructing the research design.

The research design will be reviewed by the leading worlds` experts in the field of cultural-historical psychology. The review is based on the assessment of how the research design conforms to general principles of cultural-historical theory and activity approach.

The Special on-line ISCAR Summer seminar is aimed at future professionals in the field – academics, researchers, educational specialists, teachers, psychologists, who are interested in psychological and pedagogical research of childhood development and education.

Key program activities:

- lectures by leading scholars;
- focus groups and individual consultations (optional);
- problem-oriented workshops (especially on methodology & data analysis on the basis of participants' research materials)
